Karl Marx – the Argument of a Company-Capital and Capital in General

By Karl Marx (1880)

Table of Contents

I. Individual Capital as One Segment
II. Total Capital as Capital in organic composition of capital
III. Organic composition of capital being read as, one labour unit, and then a management and then a national management and then an international segment of a branch of management.
IV. Fixed Capital
V. Variable Capital

VI. Fixed being assets, variable being money-elements of accounts
VII. Fixed and variable capital joined to organic composition
VIII. Labour in capital
IX. And that is capital
X. Capital is just a segment of composition
XI. Capital is limited to just this. A Company
XII. It is not anything other than the company.
XIII. Rest is free.

XIV. Capital as Many-Valued and Hydra Headed in the form being just in fact a linited head but the many-values being called capital being actually social forms of the value-form debate

XV. Value-form being complex and articulated in complexer ways than just the capital-form of value

XVI. Value being in Grundrisse the starting point which in Capital shifts to Commodity-analysis being in fact then comparable as Being, Essence and Notion which means then either use-value as Notion or in fact Exchange-Value and Use-Value both, but not without Use-Value of course.

I. Individual Capital treated as Capital in General is then called Living Labour ratios to Dead Labour

In fact then in individual capital, it is a company, but that individual is then one element of a total composition of capital which then is a segment of social composition. It is because there is a negation of capital also present.

II. The Full Picture

One thing, is then individual and situated as one capital, the totality is then the network of social relations of production.

III. Engels express this total picture more as a negation of the Jewish Question for the Hebrew appearance of Freedom more

And so the Jewish question is not alone relevant. It is actually irrelevant.

Friedrich Engels

I. Totality, conjunctures, phases and complex totalities and even phases and complex segmentations of the totality
II. Aspiration to totality without capital
III. Totality as elements, and element within totality, and so individual capital, which then becomes a individual appearance, and this hides in its veneer, the complex freedom from capital.
IV. Free liberal lives as true.
V. Veneer and hidden abode as cause of illusions in capitalists.
VI. Hidden abode of production
VII. But also surface of society
VIII. Commodities as then in a complex way, a simple commodity

IX. Commodity things as then somehow a thing as well as a individual thing.
X. Commodities as simple, not capital.
XI. Commodities are not capital
XII. Capital is a simple individual company.
XIII. Capital is not the ownership of commodities
XIV. Commodities are free and liberal commodities circulating as free.
